Richard E. Neustadt is Douglas Dillon Professor of Government in the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. For three decades an advisor to presidents, their aides, and to members of the cabinet, he is the author of Alliance Politics and the influential study, Presidential Power.

This book discusses various methods and frameworks for better use of history in the decision making process. Although the targeted group is officeholders, many of the tips are suitable for ordinary citizens. Making comparison with the past, finding similarities and differences and analyzing the source of information are three valuable skills thoroughly delivered in the book. Written in 1986, this work is a bit outdated in my opinion in terms of case studies. Some parts are abstract and takes time to understand.

This is a great guide for a government staffer. If what you do is help a senior executive decision maker there are a number of cases and examples of how history can be used properly to aid decision making. Neustadt and May taught a classic course at the Harvard University Kennedy School of Government and this is the text that resulted. I find it extremely useful in my own work. Worth reading for anyone who helps a senior leader make decisions and take action.

clear and inciteful guide to how to utilize the lessons of history in making sound and prudent decisions. I find it clear and except for the chapter on social security it keeps you engaged. Provides you the right questions to ask when trying to find a historical precedent to guide future actions. The lessons are simple and cogent and should be required reading in any masters program in government. This book will be a benefit to any reader.

This is a great read with many thought provoking details and orientations. I highly recommend this read by two noted Historians !!!!

A very useful account of real world samples of time critical decisions strategies. Worth a careful look.

wonderful book.

Good Read

The book describe how the clients of the intelligence community use history to support and make decisions. It further explains the how of using history to do better analysis of current situations. Excellent reference.
