Words That Make You Go, "Hmm..."

Synopsis

This handy, lightweight, up-to-date reference book is a valuable tool to those who frequently work with words such as court reporters, writers, editors, and students. Small and mighty, this book holds 196 pages and packs over 10,000 words in its 8.5-inch by 5.5-inch frame. Is it one word, two words, hyphenated? Just take a look inside and you will find out which of those you need for your particular usage. Two well-respected dictionaries were used to create this one-stop resource. The main entries in the book are derived from Merriam-Webster (2010) and the secondary entries from American Heritage (2013) to bring you the current spelling and parts of speech. Words change over time, and it is crucial to your work at hand that you stay current when it comes to resource material. It is our belief here at Walker House Publishing that resources more than five years old by its publication date are serving little to no value. Make an investment in yourself!

Lee M. Walker is a stenographic court reporter, certified as a Registered Professional Reporter by the National Court Reporters Association. Ms. Walker has been in the legal field for 24 years and has been a freelance court reporter in the South Florida area for over 19 years. She is currently court reporting, living, and writing in Palm Beach County, Florida. During her work as the administrator of a Facebook group relating to words, grammar, and punctuation, Ms. Walker saw a real need for her book titled Words That Make You Go, "Hmm..."

One of the best reference books I've used in quite some time. It's updated with commonly used words these days that aren't in some of my older reference books of a similar type. It seems as though she's thought of everything!

Excellent reference book!

I bought this book from Lee at a court reporting convention in 2013. The English language is constantly evolving and I find myself reaching for this book at least two to three times a week as I edit my transcripts. You won't regret buying this up-to-date reference book, even if you already have that other one that's been popular for so many years. ;-)

I love this book! I have it with me for reference when I'm transcribing tests, practicing, or I'm curious about a word. It's a lifesaver. (Yes, I used Words That Make You Go, "Hmm..." to look up "lifesaver.") See! What are you waiting for? Order it now.

I purchased this from Lee at a national reporting convention years ago. In a profession where I tend to question everything, this book has become an invaluable tool.

A great resource! As a scopist/proofreader, I find myself often looking to this book for answers. Well worth it.

As a court reporter, I love this book and use it almost daily for transcripts.

My Go-To Book! I'm a full-time court reporter and I use this book every day! It's invaluable. I love how it leaves space to write in words that may not be in the book too.
